

ATP and Cellular Respiration!

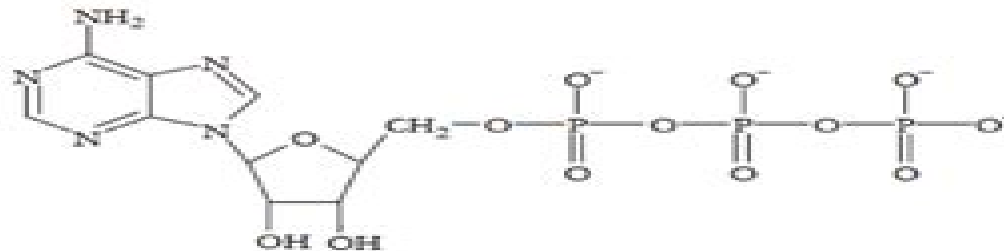

What is ATP and how is energy transferred and transformed in living systems?

Part I: ATP – The Free Energy Carrier

How does the ATP molecule capture, store, and release energy?

A sporting goods store might accept a $100 bill for the purchase of a bicycle, but the corner store will not take a $100 bill when you buy a package of gum. That is why people often carry smaller denominations in their wallets—it makes everyday transactions easier. The same concept is true for the energy transactions in cells. Cells need energy (their “currency”) to take care of everyday functions, and they need it in many denominations. As humans we eat food for energy, but food molecules provide too much energy for our cells to use all at once. For quick cellular transactions, your cells store energy in the small molecule of ATP. This is analogous to a $1 bill for your cells’ daily activities

Model 1 – Adenosine Triphosphate (ATP)

And, here is a link to a 3-D model of ATP

1. The diagram of ATP in Model 1 has three parts. Use your knowledge of biomolecules to label the molecule with an “adenine” section, a “ribose sugar” section, and a “phosphate groups” section using google draw or describe which part is the adenine, the ribose, and the phosphate groups.

Phosphate group: the group that has PO
Ribose sugar: the group that has OH
Adenine: the group that has NH

2. Refer to Model 1. What is meant by the “tri-” in the name adenosine triphosphate?

It means that there are three phosphate groups
