

A strategic champion

The lead body, i.e. community safety partnership or health and well-being board, should identify a member who will have the strategic oversight for this client group.

The role will be to:

- + Oversee the implementation of the action plan
- + Regularly report to the group on progress and problems
- + Ensure this client group remains a focus of the group's agenda.

Develop a clear statement of the priorities within this client group

The strategy will be focused on clients who place a significant and repeated burden or pose a significant risk to themselves or others.

The lead body will need to agree a local definition of the client group. Each area of the country will have different priorities when considering who places the greatest burden on public services. In some areas hospital admissions might be the priority, in others community safety or anti-social behaviour.

However, any definition is likely to encompass those who:

- + Have a history of repeated violence to other people
- + Are at high risk of suicide or serious self-harm
- + Are regularly made homeless through alcohol use or are repeatedly found street drinking
- + Have a history of frequent alcohol related presentations to A&E or admissions to hospital
- + Have a history of repeated alcohol related offending or anti-social behaviour
- + Raise significant and repeated concerns regarding the welfare of children or vulnerable adults.
