

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of middle-aged women. The study was conducted in a community-based setting. The participants were 30 middle-aged women who were randomly divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical fitness and health of the participants were measured at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health than the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness and health of middle-aged women.
