

A detailed oil painting of a Native American man, likely of the Navajo or Hopi tribe, wearing a vibrant red turban with blue and white decorative bands. He has a serious expression and is adorned with large, dark, fringed earrings. He wears a dark blue or black jacket over a white shirt and a dark cravat. A wide, ornate sash with intricate patterns and colors (red, yellow, and black) is draped across his chest. The background is a soft, neutral tone.

Berger Investigation,1919      The Nation and Athenæum ,1923      The Nation and Its Fragments Partha Chatterjee,2020-05-05 In this book the prominent theorist Partha Chatterjee looks at the creative and powerful results of the nationalist imagination in Asia and Africa that are posited not on identity but on difference with the nationalism propagated by the West. Arguing that scholars have been mistaken in equating political nationalism with nationalism as such, he shows how anticolonialist nationalists produced their own domain of sovereignty within colonial society well before beginning their political battle with the imperial power. These nationalists divided their culture into material and spiritual domains and staked an early claim to the spiritual sphere represented by religion, caste, women, and the family and peasants. Chatterjee shows how middle class elites first imagined the nation into being in this spiritual dimension and then readied it for political contest all the while normalizing the aspirations of the various marginal groups that typify the spiritual sphere. While Chatterjee's specific examples are drawn from Indian sources with a copious use of Bengali language materials, the book is a contribution to the general theoretical discussion on nationalism and the modern state. Examining the paradoxes involved with creating first a uniquely non-Western nation in the spiritual sphere and then a universalist nation state in the material sphere, the author finds that the search for a postcolonial modernity is necessarily linked with past struggles against modernity.
