Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of self-reported depression between men and women who had been exposed to violence during childhood and adulthood. Data from the National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health (N = 9,800) revealed that exposure to violence during childhood and adulthood was associated with higher rates of self-reported depression among both men and women. However, the association between exposure to violence and self-reported depression was stronger for women than for men.
