Institute of Medicine, National Academy of Engineering, National Academy of Sciences, Norman R. Augustine, 2007-09-14 The aviation and telecommunication revolutions have conspired to make distance increasingly irrelevant An important consequence of this is that US citizens accustomed to competing with their neighbors for jobs now must compete with candidates from all around the world These candidates are numerous highly motivated increasingly well educated and willing to work for a fraction of the compensation traditionally expected by US workers If the United States is to offset the latter disadvantage and provide its citizens with the opportunity for high quality jobs it will require the nation to excel at innovation that is to be first to market new products and services based on new knowledge and the ability to apply that knowledge This capacity to discover create and market will continue to be heavily dependent on the nation s prowess in science and technology Indicators of trends in these fields are at best highly disconcerting While many factors warrant urgent attention the two most critical are these 1 America must repair its failing K 12 educational system particularly in mathematics and science in part by providing more teachers qualified to teach those subjects and 2 the federal government must markedly increase its investment in basic research that is in the creation of new knowledge Only by providing leading edge human capital and knowledge capital can America continue to maintain a high standard of living including providing national security for its citizens Strategic Social Marketing Jeff French, Ross Gordon, 2019-11-08 Adopting an international approach and offering a broader context this second edition of Strategic Social Marketing presents social marketing principles in a strategic critical and reflexive way illustrating the value of applying marketing to solve social problems including A brand new chapter on evaluation Updated advances in relevant research and theorizing New vignettes and short case studies to illustrate theories throughout the text The authors explore the reasons why marketing should be an integral component of all social programme design and delivery when looking to achieve social good while progressing on to the nature and application of social marketing rethinking traditional concepts such as value and exchange in the social context Their hands on features then let students lay out strategy plans frameworks and tactics to influence behaviours

Indigenous People, Race Relations and Australian Sport Christopher J. Hallinan, Barry Judd, 2016-05-06 The Indigenous peoples of Australia have a proud history of participation and the achievement of excellence in Australian sports Historically Australian sports have provided a rare and important social context in which Indigenous Australians could engage with and participate in non Indigenous society Today Indigenous Australian people in sports continue to provide important points of reference around which national public dialogue about racial and cultural relations in Australia takes place Yet much media coverage surrounding these issues and almost all academic interest concerning Indigenous people and Australian sports is constructed from non Indigenous perspectives With a few notable exceptions the racial and cultural implications of Australian sports as viewed from an Indigenous Australian Studies perspective remains understudied The media coverage and academic discussion of Indigenous people and Australian sports is largely constructed within the context of Anglo Australian nationalist discourse and becomes most emphasised when reporting on aspects of racial and cultural explanations of Indigenous sporting excellence and failures associated anomalous behaviour This book investigates the many ways that Indigenous Australians have engaged with Australian sports and the racial and cultural readings that have been associated with these engagements Questions concerning the importance that sports play in constructions of Australian indigeneities and the extent to which these have been maintained as marginal to Australian national identity are the central critical themes merely because they belong to the same species as ourselves towards nonhuman animals but also that we safeguard the integrity of nature. In this light, projects that aim to engineer the genetic material of animals to reduce their capacities to feel pain and to suffer are morally suspect. The same applies to projects that aim to develop in vitro flesh even if the production of such flesh should be welcomed on other grounds. The theory proposed in this book is accompanied by a political goal: the vegan project, which strives for a qualified ban on the consumption of animal products. Deckers also provides empirical evidence that some support for this goal exists already and his analysis of the views of others, including those of slaughterhouse workers, reveals that the vegan project stands firm in spite of public opposition. Many charges have been pressed against vegan diets, including that they alienate human beings from nature, that they increase human food security concerns, and that they are unsustainable. Deckers argues that these charges are legitimate in some cases but that in many situations, vegan diets are actually superior. For those who remain doubtful, the book also contains an appendix that considers whether vegan diets might actually be nutritionally adequate.
