Girls, Gender and

Physical Education Kimberly L. Oliver, David Kirk, 2015-07-24 In this powerfully argued and progressive study Kimberly Oliver and David Kirk call for a radical reconstruction of the teaching of physical education for girls Despite forty years of theorization and practical intervention girls are still disengaging from physical education dropping out of physical activity and suffering negative consequences in terms of their health and well being as a result This book challenges the conventional narrative that girls are somehow to blame for this disengagement and instead identifies important new ways of working with girls developing a new pedagogical model for girl friendly physical education The book locates our understanding of the experiences of girls in physical education in the broader context of young people's multifaceted engagements with popular physical culture Adopting an activist perspective it outlines a programme of action informed by principled pragmatism and based on four critical elements student centred pedagogy critical study of embodiment inquiry based physical education centred in action and listening and responding to girls over time It explores the implications of this new thinking for teaching research PETE and policy and outlines a future agenda for work in this area Offering a profound theoretical critique of contemporary research and practice as well as a new programme of action Girls Gender and Physical Education is essential reading for all researchers advanced students and practitioners with an interest in the issues of gender equity and inclusion in physical education

Disabled Children and Young People in Sport, Physical Activity and Physical Education

Anthony J. Maher, Justin A. Haegele, 2024-11-28 This book presents research on disabled children and young people in sport physical activity and physical education settings using empirical data gathered either with or from disabled children and young people centring their experiences and amplifying their voices while decentralising non disabled voices in research about them Much of the albeit limited research relating to disabled children and young people in sport physical activity and physical education settings is from the perspective of teachers school leaders coaches support assistants and special educational needs coordinators While this research has undoubtedly contributed to developing a rich tapestry of knowledge about disability and sport physical activity and physical education the views and experiences of disabled children and young people are conspicuous by their absence Thus in this book contributors showcase research that centres on the experiences and amplifies the voices of disabled children and young people When reading these articles readers are encouraged to reflexively consider the ways and extent to which their own research and practice endeavours to include empower and emancipate disabled children and young people Contributors hope that this book will encourage sport physical activity and physical education scholars especially those who do not research disability to consider the significance of including disabled people as active participants in more general research studies This book will be an essential reading for those who want to learn more about involving disabled children and young people in research centring their experiences and amplifying their voices in sport physical activity and physical education as part of the multi stakeholder approach advocated by Vickerman and Maher 2018 It was originally published as a special issue of Sport Education and Society
