Sustainable Agriculture in the Era of the OMICs Revolution Channa S. Prakash,Sajid Fiaz,Muhammad Azhar Nadeem,Faheem Shehzad Baloch,Abdul Qayyum,2023-01-01 Access to food with enough calories and nutrients is a fundamental right of every human The global population has exceeded 7 8 billion and is expected to pass 10 billion by 2055 Such rapid population increase presents a great challenge for food supply More grain production is needed to provide basic calories for humans Thus it is crucial to produce 60 110% more food to fill the gap between food production and the demand of future generations Meanwhile food nutritional values are of increasing interest to accommodate industrialized modern lives The instability of food production caused by global climate change presents another great challenge The global warming rate has become more rapid in recent decades with more frequent extreme climate change including higher temperatures drought and floods Our world faces various unprecedented scenarios such as rising temperatures which causes melting glaciers and the resulting various biotic and abiotic stresses ultimately leading to food scarcity In these circumstances it is of utmost importance to examine the genetic basis and extensive utilization of germplasm to develop climate resilient cultivars through the application of plant breeding and biotechnological tools Future crops must adapt to these new and unpredictable environments Crop varieties resistant to biotic and abiotic stresses are also needed as plant disease insects drought high and low temperature stresses are expected to be impacted by climate change Thus we need a food production system that can simultaneously satisfy societal demands and long term development Since the Green Revolution in the 1960s farming has been heavily dependent on high input of nitrogen and pesticides This leads to environmental pollution which is not sustainable in the long run Therefore a new breeding scheme is urgently needed to enable sustainable agriculture including new strategies to develop varieties and crops that have high yield potential high yield stability and superior grain quality and nutrition while also using less consumption of water fertilizer and chemicals in light of environmental protection While we face these challenges we also have great opportunities especially with flourishing developments in omics technologies High quality reference genomes are becoming available for a larger number of species with some species having more than one reference genome The genome wide re sequencing of diverse varieties enables the identification of core and pan genomes An integration of omics data will enable a rapid and high throughput identification of many genes simultaneously for a relevant trait This will change our current research paradigm fundamentally from single gene analysis to pathway or network analysis This will also expand our understanding of crop domestication and improvement In addition with the knowledge gained from omics data in combination with new technologies like targeted gene editing we can breed new varieties and crops for sustainable agriculture

Africa's Gene Revolution Matthew A. Schnurr,2019-11-07 As development donors invest hundreds of millions of dollars into improved crops designed to alleviate poverty and hunger Africa has emerged as the final frontier in the global debate over agricultural biotechnology The first data driven assessment of the ecological social and political factors that shape our understanding of genetic modification Africa s Gene Revolution surveys twenty years of efforts to use genomics based breeding to enhance yields and livelihoods for African farmers Matthew Schnurr considers the full range of biotechnologies currently in commercial use and those in development including hybrids marker assisted breeding tissue culture and genetic engineering Drawing on interviews with biotechnology experts alongside research conducted with more than two hundred farmers across eastern western and southern Africa Schnurr reveals a profound incongruity between the optimistic rhetoric that accompanies genetic modification technology and the realities of the smallholder farmers who are its intended beneficiaries Through the lens of political ecology this book demonstrates that the current emphasis on improved seeds discounts the geographic social ecological and economic contexts in which the producers of these crops operate Bringing the voices of farmers to the foreground of this polarizing debate Africa s Gene Revolution contends that meaningful change will come from a reconfiguration not only of the plant s genome but of the entire agricultural system
