growth in the technology available to the collision analyst changing the way reconstruction is practiced in fundamental ways. The greatest technological advances for the crash reconstruction community have come in the realms of photogrammetry and digital media analysis. The widespread use of scanning technology has facilitated the implementation of powerful new tools to digitize forensic data, create 3D models and visualize and analyze crash vehicles and environments. The introduction of unmanned aerial systems and standardization of crash data recorders to the crash reconstruction community have enhanced the ability of a crash analyst to visualize and model the components of a crash reconstruction. Because of the technological changes occurring in the industry, many SAE papers have been written to address the validation and use of new tools for collision reconstruction. Collision Reconstruction Methodologies Volumes 1-12 bring together seminal SAE technical papers surrounding advancements in the crash reconstruction field. Topics featured in the series include Night Vision Study and Photogrammetry, Vehicle Event Data Recorders, Motorcycle, Heavy Vehicle, Bicycle and Pedestrian Accident Reconstruction. The goal is to provide the latest technologies and methodologies being introduced into collision reconstruction, appealing to crash analysts, consultants and safety engineers alike.

Reforming the Reform Susan L. Moffitt, Michaela Krug, O'Neill, David K. Cohen, 2023-08-18. School reforms are almost always born out of big dreams and a well-meaning desire to change the status quo of the American education system as we know it. It was the product of such a reform. But between the lawmakers who spearhead these changes and the students whose education is at stake, there are countless teachers, principals, administrators and local politicians, and correspondingly countless ways that things can go sideways. In Reforming the Reform, political scientist Susan Moffitt, education scholar Michaela O'Neill and the late policy and education scholar David K. Cohen take on a wide-ranging examination of the nitty-gritty of school reform. They focus especially on mezzo-level actors but also the countless school superintendents, principals and teachers figuring out how to apply a new policy in the unique context of their district or school. They conducted more than 250 interviews with mezzo-level administrators in Tennessee and California, chosen as contrasts for their different political makeup and centralization of the education system between 2016 and 2020, ending their data collection as schools were going virtual at the beginning of the pandemic. They also collected survey data from across the US. Finally, they turned to archival data dating to the earliest American educational reform, the creation of a centralized national education policy. Taken together, this data demonstrates an impressive ambition to identify common problems that arise when a general policy is implemented in a local context. The framework provides a general explanation for problems facing social policy reforms in federalist systems, including healthcare, and offers pathways forward for education policy in particular.

Integrating Human Factors Methods and Systems Thinking for Transport Analysis and Design Gemma J. M. Read, Vanessa Beanland, Michael G. Lenné, Neville A. Stanton, Paul M. Salmon, 2017-07-26 Governments and road safety agencies around the world have either introduced or are considering safe system strategies a long overdue acknowledgement that different elements of the road system contribute to road safety outcomes Human factors approaches have a leading role here in both conceptualising the road system as a complex sociotechnical system and in providing practical approaches to support true systems based countermeasures This book illustrates the potential for integrating contemporary systems based human factors methods with modern day driving assessment methods such as vehicle instrumentation and driving simulation to understand and enhance performance in modern day road transport systems The book outlines why a fundamental paradigm shift is needed in the way these systems are designed and operated and illustrates how a wide range of accepted human factors approaches can be applied successfully to road transport to revolutionise the countermeasure design process The practical illustrations of these human factors methods are applied to a long standing road and rail safety issue rail level crossings where the road and rail systems intersect The final chapter of the book highlights the utility of the human factors approach to reducing road trauma and discusses future applications of the approach railway journal ,1895 New York Court of Appeals. Records and Briefs. New York (State)., Model Selection and Inference Kenneth P. Burnham,David R. Anderson,2013-11-11 We wrote this book to introduce graduate students and research workers in various scientific disciplines to the use of information theoretic approaches in the analysis of empirical data In its fully developed form the information theoretic approach allows inference based on more than one model including estimates of unconditional precision in its initial form it is useful in selecting a best model and ranking the remaining models We believe that often the critical issue in data analysis is the selection of a good approximating model that best represents the inference supported by the data an estimated best approximating model Information theory includes the well known Kullback Leibler distance between two models actually probability distributions and this represents a fundamental quantity in science In 1973 Hirotugu Akaike derived an estimator of the relative Kullback Leibler distance based on Fisher's maximized log likelihood His measure now called Akaike's information criterion AIC provided a new paradigm for model selection in the analysis of empirical data His approach with a fundamental link to information theory is relatively simple and easy to use in practice but little taught in statistics classes and far less understood in the applied sciences than should be the case We do not accept the notion that there is a simple true model in the biological sciences
