- As a wave travels through a medium, it transports energy but does not transport matter in the direction of the wave.
- Transverse waves are waves in a direction (perp) the frequency vector wave length longitudinal waves travel through a series of compressions and rarefactions.
- waves can be described by amplitude frequency wavelength period speed phase rest position rest point
- as a wave travels through a medium, particles are displaced and continue their motion perp to the wave direction.
- Electromagnetic waves differ from other types of waves because they do not need medium through a vacuum.
- a medium is required for mechanical waves to travel through it is the medium that transmits the disturbance from one location to another.
- as the frequency increases and the wavelength decreases and the speed is the same then the amplitude is increasing.
- As frequency is increasing and the wavelength is decreasing and the speed is the same then the amplitude is increasing.
- waves are traveling through a medium as a transverse displacement particle of matter in the same direction the wave is traveling then the type of wave is a longitudinal wave.
- because the medium is being displaced in the direction of the wave direction of travel.
