EXERCISE 9 PROBLEMS—PART I

The following questions are based on Figure 9.1, showing Earth's latitudes and lines of longitude.

Figure 9.1: Earth's latitudes and longitudes, including the Equator and the Prime Meridian.

1. What is the latitude of the equatorial circumference of the Earth? 0° 2.
  - (a) What is the latitude of the longest day in the Northern Hemisphere? 90°N
  - (b) What is the latitude of the longest day in the Southern Hemisphere? 90°S
3. Why is the Earth's equatorial circumference smaller than its circumference at the poles? Because the Earth is not a perfect sphere, it is slightly flattened at the poles and bulging at the equator.
4. Drawing the equator and the axis of the Earth, illustrate the following:
  - (a) Why does the equator have the longest day and night? Because the equator is perpendicular to the axis of rotation, so it receives the most direct sunlight.
  - (b) Why does the North Pole have the longest day and the shortest night? Because the North Pole is tilted towards the Sun, so it receives the most direct sunlight.
  - (c) Why does the South Pole have the longest day and the shortest night? Because the South Pole is tilted away from the Sun, so it receives the least direct sunlight.
5. Why is the length of the day and night at the equator the same all year long? Because the equator is perpendicular to the axis of rotation, so it receives the same amount of sunlight all year long.
6. Why is the length of the day and night at the poles the same all year long? Because the poles are tilted towards or away from the Sun, so they receive the same amount of sunlight all year long.
7. Why is the length of the day and night at the equator the same all year long? Because the equator is perpendicular to the axis of rotation, so it receives the same amount of sunlight all year long.
8. Why is the length of the day and night at the poles the same all year long? Because the poles are tilted towards or away from the Sun, so they receive the same amount of sunlight all year long.
