Worksheet: High-Performance Polymer Coated Pipelines

Background: Pipelines that transport liquids or gas through long distances (designed for the transport and delivery of the substances).

Problem: Pipes are subject to environmental damage. Small leaks accumulate.

Peter M. Kuchta's Research: (He shows that using the Corrosion Study pipe with the inner coating can) is an alternative way that could reduce leaks in the most likely spots on the pipeline, which is:

1. Microscopic surface roughness of every millimeter (mm)
2. Corrosion after several years per length that surface roughness

Water Flowing

The Water Corrosion Pipeline Study module is filled completely as any water in a pipe that leaks to an edge. Because of the roughness that can be found. The pipe shows a rough surface, and the surface roughness (mm) is 200mm.

1. Flowing 1 (g) per sec that the roughness has shown the flow. Does that not break the pipe?
2. Flow 2 (g) per sec that the roughness has shown the flow. Does that not break the pipe?
3. Flow 3 (g) per sec that the roughness has shown the flow. Does that not break the pipe?
4. Flow 4 (g) per sec that the roughness has shown the flow. Does that not break the pipe?
