1. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be changed.

There is one more important consideration in the problem of whether to use a particular type of evidence. This is the question of the reliability of the evidence. If the evidence is unreliable, it should not be used. For example, if a witness is known to be unreliable, his testimony should not be used. Similarly, if a piece of evidence is known to be unreliable, it should not be used. The reliability of the evidence is a crucial factor in determining its admissibility.
