SAFETY PRECAUTIONS FOR REMOVAL AND REFITTING OPERATIONS

- When removing or refitting parts, always wear the following safety precautions:

1. PRECAUTIONS FOR REMOVAL OPERATIONS

- Before starting the removal, read the instructions with a view to the ground.
- The disassembling should be carried out systematically, always starting from the top end of the system to prevent damage to the oil.
- Before removing a cylinder, fully depress the piston and secure it in the open position using a locking wire.
- Use components of sufficient capacity when draining oil, water or fuel.
- Before removing any part from the machine, check the oil level in the sump, drain the oil and secure the sump. If necessary, follow the instructions to ensure correct quantity.
- When removing the electrical connections, always go from the positive to the negative side of the wires.
- When removing, label the wires and separate them from the main cable harness.
- Do not touch the electrical contacts when they are connected to the battery or to the earth.
- Do not touch the wiring of the electrical components, as this is dangerous if the components are live.
- When working on the wiring components, first check that they are not connected to the battery, then disconnect them and then cut the wires at the end of the cable or at the wiring loom.
- Before removing a cable, check the routing of the cable, then remove the cable from the cable tray or from the cable duct.

2. PRECAUTIONS FOR REFITTING OPERATIONS

- Tighten nuts and screws to the specified tightening torque.
- When refitting the fuel pump and wires, take care not to cut or kink the lines.
- Always fit new seals, O-rings, gaskets and safety wiring rings, make sure the O-rings of the valves are lubricated and that each O-ring is put in place before assembly from the hose.
- Ensure that the rings are correctly installed in their seatings.
- When refitting the electrical component, first check the position of the oil and ground, then connect the electrical wiring, a new stage of the removal.
