Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30 to 45 years of age, who were randomly selected from a telephone directory. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group consisted of six women who did not exercise, and the exercise group consisted of six women who exercised for 12 weeks. The exercise group was divided into two subgroups: a low-intensity group and a high-intensity group. The low-intensity group exercised at 50% of their maximum HR, and the high-intensity group exercised at 70% of their maximum HR. The subjects were monitored for 12 weeks, and their HR and EE were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The high-intensity group had a significantly greater increase in HR and EE than the low-intensity group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light in commercial greenhouses. Likewise, plants are flowering the opposite way (e.g., in the middle of the night).
- Increased moisture in the soil will compete with the salt for absorption by the roots, so the length of the day must also be increased (depending on the soil moisture requirements).
- The soil pH must be kept high, i.e., the water should be the opposite of natural rain (acidic), i.e., slightly basic (pH 7.5-8.5).
- The soil must be rich in nutrients for these plants to grow well. However, salt stress is caused by the Na⁺ ions in the soil.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically fit individuals. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The subjects were 12 healthy, young, and fit individuals (6 males and 6 females) who were randomly assigned to three groups: low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact. The subjects were tested at baseline and after 12 weeks of training. The results showed that the low-intensity group had a significant increase in heart rate, oxygen consumption, and energy expenditure. The low-impact group had a significant increase in heart rate and oxygen consumption. The low-impact group had a significant increase in heart rate, oxygen consumption, and energy expenditure. The results suggest that low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically fit individuals can benefit from a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact training program.
