Carrillo-Alvarez, Miriam Rodriguez-Monforte, Jordi Vilaró, Katherine Simone McGilton, 2024-12-26 Worldwide there is a generalized trend toward aged societies Between 2015 and 2050 the proportion of the world's population over 60 years will nearly double from 12% to 22% As life expectancy continues to increase and natality rates lower not only the composition of countries will change but also its health landscape However an increased life expectancy does not necessarily mean a healthy life In most high income countries more than 20% of those years are lived in ill health due to chronic conditions caused by non communicable diseases which compromises functional ability and well being key components of healthy aging In this way not only people's lives but also societal structures are being affected Based on the life course approach to healthy aging aging starts from conception In this regard the promotion of healthy aging requires preventive strategies that enhance capacities during growth and development maintain them for as long as possible after maturity and slow down their rate of decline Moreover considering healthy aging across the lifespan entails focusing on different factors life opportunities and choices that might significantly influence health status lifestyle as well as health and social inequalities in older age and challenges the focus of most research on the topic which exclusively investigates the effect of influences operating in the later stages of life

A Routine method of mental examinations for naval recruits Louis Edward Bisch, 1919 Tasks, Skills, and Institutions Carlos

Gradín, Piotr Lewandowski, Simone Schotte, Kunal Sen, 2023-06-22 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC SA 3.0 IGO licence It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations The book investigates the trends in earnings inequalities in developing countries to determine the main drivers Particular attention is paid to extending the most conventional explanations of changes in earnings inequality based on the relative abundance of skilled and unskilled labour with recent theories that put the nature of tasks performed by workers in their jobs rather than their skills at the centre of the analysis The latter approach has helped to explain relevant patterns recently observed in the trends in earnings inequality in the US and other industrialized countries Developed countries have experienced a polarization in earnings and in employment namely stronger growth in the earnings and jobs for the most and least skilled workers at the expense of those in the middle This pattern has been attributed to differences in tasks whether a given job is routine and can be automated or offshored rather than skills and has reduced employment and incomes in typical middle class jobs in manufacturing and services However this narrative has been developed in the context of mature industrialized economies on the frontier of technological change that have also seen a large set of activities offshored to emergent economies Evidence for developing countries however is still scarce and faces bigger challenges both conceptual and in terms of gathering the necessary data on earnings and task content of jobs This book presents the main results of the UNU WIDER project The Changing Nature of Work and Inequality aiming to fill this knowledge gap
