Conflict Narratives in Middle Childhood Marsha D. Walton, Alice J. Davidson, 2017-03-27 Conflict Narratives in Middle Childhood presents evidence from twenty years of research examining nearly 3 000 narratives from 1 600 children in eight settings in two countries about their own experiences with interpersonal conflict. Close readings combined with systematic analysis of dozens of features of the stories reveal that when children are invited to write or talk about their own conflicts they produce accounts that are often charming and sometimes heartbreaking and that always bring to light their social, emotional, and moral development. Children's personal stories about conflict reveal how they create and maintain friendships, how they understand and react to the social aggression that threatens those friendships, and how they understand and cope with physical aggression ranging from the pushing and poking of peers to criminal violence in their neighborhoods or families. Sometimes children describe the efforts of adults to influence their conflicts; sometimes they welcome and sometimes resist. Their stories show them taking on gender and other cultural commitments. We are not just watching children become more and more like us as they move through the elementary school years; we are watching them become the architects of a future we will only see to the extent that we understand their way of making sense.

The Stories We Tell Valerie N. Faulkner, Patricia L. Marshall, Lee V. Stiff, 2019-08-29 The Stories We Tell Math Race Bias Opportunity positions educators as professional decision makers whose every day choices are deeply consequential. After exploring topics ranging from the early identification of talent to the use of demographic characteristics to make academic decisions and the problematic casting of a gap in mathematical performance as about the students themselves, the book explores how professional decision making and a more precise use of data can impact mathematical performance outcomes. With gentle precision, the book analyzes the patterns of practice in place as educators sort children according to perceived needs. Through case studies, the authors reconfigure the mathematics achievement gap as being about opportunity provided or denied at both the classroom and systemic levels. The book has implications for school personnel as well as others curious about how opportunity impacts outcomes and how data is or is not used to make decisions about children. Educators who challenge themselves to engage with the possibility of bias and then face the stories we tell ourselves about the race, talent, development, student merit relationship will have the opportunity to
