The graph illustrates the multiplier effect in a two-sector economy. The vertical axis represents Expenditure (£ million per week) and the horizontal axis represents Income (£ million per week). Three parallel expenditure functions are shown, all with a slope of 0.5. The initial equilibrium is at point A, where the expenditure function $S = 50 + 0.5Y$ intersects the 45-degree line $S = Y$, resulting in an income of £100 million per week. A shift in the expenditure function to $S = 100 + 0.5Y$ leads to a new equilibrium at point B, where the expenditure function intersects the 45-degree line, resulting in a higher income of £200 million per week. The multiplier is 2, as the change in income (£100 million) is twice the change in autonomous expenditure (£50 million).

Q 211 Identify the value of the integral property in column (B) to the (A) column in the following table.
