

Exacerbated Retractable Mesenteritis – Rare Case of Abdominal Pain

Introduction

Retractable mesenteritis, mesenteric panniculitis and mesenteric lipodystrophy are conditions of sclerosing mesenteritis. One histopathologic finding is predominant at a given time. Fibrosis is predominant in retractile mesenteritis, chronic inflammation in mesenteric panniculitis and fat necrosis in mesenteric lipodystrophy (George V et al. RadioGraphics 2013; 33: 1053–1080). Apart from ischaemia of the mesenterium, the pathogenetic mechanisms of the disease under discussion include diseases of the rheumatic type, trauma, pancreatitis and tumour diseases. It may also be caused by previous abdominal surgery panniculitis (Sabaté JM et al. AJR Am J Roentgenol 1999; 172: 625–629, Zissin R et al. Br J Radiol 2006; 79: 37–43).

Case description

A 58-year-old woman presented at our hospital with increasing abdominal pain, which had occurred for the first time six months previously. She reported about a weight loss of 11 kg. She didn't have fever or nocturnal sweating. There was no history of tumour disease, surgery or trauma. Gastroscopy and colonoscopy already performed and yielded normal findings.

Diagnostics

Laboratory tests produced a CRP value of 16.58 mg/dl (normal range 0–1.2 mg/dl), a leukocyte count of  $13.34 \cdot 10^9/\mu\text{l}$  ( $4–10 \cdot 10^9/\mu\text{l}$ ) and a BSR of 94 mm after one hour and 99 mm after two hours (normal range 6–10 and 5–20 mm). The other laboratory values were normal. Ultrasound did not yield any findings pointing towards a diagnosis. A CT examination of the abdomen was performed with a 16-line multislice CT (Brilliance CT 16, Philips Healthcare, Hamburg) and a collimation of  $16 \times 1.5$  mm, an FOV of  $180 \times 180$ , a matrix of  $512 \times 512$  and a tube voltage of 120 kV at 375 mA after intravenous administration of contrast medium of 150 ml Imeron 350, and oral and rectal contrasting of the gastrointestinal tract with dis-luted Gastrografin. In the portal venous phase after 55 sec. delay, the pattern of a pronounced inflammatory reaction of the mesenterium was seen (Fig. 1a–c). For further assessment of a tumour of the small intestine and differentiation of the inflammatory changes a MRI enterochysma was performed (Achieva 3.0 Tesla, Philips Healthcare, Hamburg). A Sense-XL coil with coronal T2-TSE-SPAIR, coronal T1-TFE-OP-FB weighting (slice thickness 6 mm in each case), transverse THRIVE and transverse T1-TFE-OP-FB after i.v. contrast administration of Gd-DTPA (slice thickness 4 mm overlapping and 6 mm) and transverse T2-TSE (slice thickness 6 mm). The suspicion of an exacerbated, retractile mesenteritis was put forward (Fig. 2a–e). Since a malignant cause of the mesenterial changes could not be ruled out, a surgical biopsy was taken. The pathological findings revealed a medium-grade, septally pronounced mesenteritis accompanied by a fibrous peritoneal reaction on the basis of a lipofibromatosis of the mesenterial tissue. No evidence of malignant cells (Fig. 3a, b).

Therapy and course

After a postoperative course without complications, the patient was free of symptoms and in good general condition when she was discharged on the 11th post-

Wexner, 2021-09-02 Recent discoveries and clarifications of known information about the mesentery have now established that these complex structures function together as an individual organ within the human body As such conditions that affect the mesentery can now be grouped within a single area of study and clinical practice The various aspects of mesenteric diseases have not been brought together in a single source and this book aims to bring them together for the first time It will cover general areas such as anatomy histology and physiology of the mesentery A description of diagnostic procedures used to evaluate patients with mesenteric disorders will follow A practical survey with detailed descriptions of medical surgical and neoplastic disorders of the mesentery is also be included This book is intended to be a guide for clinical practitioners including gastroenterologists general surgeons colorectal surgeons primary care physicians nurse practitioners and physician assistants who manage patients with mesenteric disorders      Current List of Medical Literature, 1959 Includes section Recent book acquisitions varies Recent United States publications formerly published separately by the U S Army Medical Library      *Gastrointestinal Disease: Ch.49.Diarrhea. Bergman, 2012-12-06 This volume focusing on the ureter and the diseases which involve it is an updated second edition Many journals and textbooks deal with the physiology pathology diagnosis and therapy of derangements of the urinary tract In most instances however the discussion properly centers on the disease process itself and its primary aspects with only a tangential description of effects on the ureter The editor is therefore correct that the ureter itself should be considered a major organ Though it has been regarded in the recent past as a simple muscular tube reacting to stretching or filling by contraction this simplistic view of ureteral physiology is changing fast With expanded knowledge of ureteral physiology a pharmacology is developing which is becoming useful to the clinician in many ways One of the most interesting aspects of the ureter is its role in inducing the permanent kidney the metanephros Relatively slight displacements in the origin of the ureteral bud result in ectopic ureteral orifices and a wide range of congenital anomalies An ureteral bud which arises medial to the normal position at the genu of the mesonephric duct results in a lateral and usually incompetent ureterovesical junction after the duct is taken up to form a portion of the trigone This appears certainly to be the developmental mechanism which results in primary reflux International Medical and Surgical Survey ,1924 Index-catalogue of the Library of the Surgeon-General's Office, United States Army National Library of Medicine (U.S.),1948 Atlas of Gynecologic Surgical Pathology E-Book Philip B.
