

Ch. 9 Meiosis

9.1 Discovery of meiosis

- Gametes- reproductive cells (egg and sperm)
 - Contain half the number of chromosomes in somatic cells
 - Male and female gametes fuse to form a zygote, which has two complete copies of each chromosome
- Formation of gametes involves a mechanism to halve the number of chromosomes in somatic cells
 - Meiosis is a reduction division that results in gametes

- Germ-line cell (2n, diploid) Meiosis female gamete (n, haploid)
- The zygote divides by mitosis and the cells grow to become an adult, which will produce gametes (egg or sperm) by meiosis in its gonads
 - Meiosis ensures a consistent chromosome number across generations

Two types of reproduction

- Reproduction can be asexual or sexual
 - Ex of asexual- binary fission in prokaryotes

Asexual	Sexual
Single individual is the sole parent	Two parents give rise to offspring
One parent passes all genes to offspring	Each parents passes half of the genes to offspring
Offspring are genetically identical to parent	Offspring have a unique combination of genes inherited from both parents
Results in a clone	Results in a greater genetic version

9.2 the sexual life cycle

- In animals, cells that will undergo meiosis are reserved early on (during development) for the purpose of reproduction
- The germ-line cells located in the gonads (ovaries and testes) are diploid, like somatic cells
- Only germ-line cells will undergo meiosis to produce haploid gametes that are not genetically identical

9.3 the stages of meiosis

- Meiosis involves 2 cell divisions:
 - Meiosis I and meiosis II
 - DNA is replicated only before meiosis I
