Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in a community sample of young adults. Methods: A cross-sectional survey of 1,000 young adults (18–24 years) was conducted. The survey included questions about mental health problems, substance use, and demographic factors. Results: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems was 15.2%. The most common mental health problems were anxiety disorders (8.5%), depression (7.8%), and substance use disorders (3.2%). Conclusions: The prevalence of self-reported mental health problems in this community sample of young adults is relatively high. Further research is needed to explore the factors associated with these problems and to develop interventions to reduce their prevalence.
