Writing Human Factors Research Papers Don Harris, 2016-12-05 Writing high quality papers suitable for publication within international scientific journals is now an essential skill for all early career researchers their career progression and the reputation of the department in which they work depends upon it. However many manuscripts are rejected or sent back for major reworking not because the science they contain is in any way bad but because the same problems keep occurring in the way that the material is presented. It is one thing to write a good scientific paper however it is quite another thing to get it published. This requires some additional nous. In writing this book Don Harris draws upon nearly a quarter of a century of experience as an author and reviewer of research papers and ultimately as a journal editor. By his own admission it contains all the things he wished that his mentors had told him 25 years ago but didn't. The material in the book is drawn from many years of finding all these things out for himself usually by trial and error but mostly error. The text adopts a much lighter touch than is normally found in books of this type after all who really wants to read a book about writing research papers. The author describes his own unique approach to writing journal papers which in his own words has proved to be extremely successful. All major points are illustrated with examples from his own published works. The book is written in the form of a manual for constructing a journal manuscript read a chapter write a section. However the material it contains goes beyond just this and also describes how to select a target journal the manuscript submission process what referees are looking for in a good journal paper and how to deal with the referees comments. Each chapter concludes with a checklist to ensure all the key elements have been addressed. Research Paper, 1965

Playing with Density Anita Grams,2018-11-23 The revised Swiss Spatial Planning Law which came into effect in 2014 and the minimum strategy of inward development before outward development obligate municipalities to direct their spatial development to ward existing largely built up spaces and to coordinate building zone dimensioning across municipal boundaries For many small and medium sized municipalities in Switzerland this means changing thought patterns with regard to spatial planning practice A major element of inward development is the constructional densification of existing settlement areas However especially in small and medium sized municipalities densification is confronted with numerous problems such as insufficient acceptance of dense building typologies mobilisation obstacles for reserves secured under building law and the lack of thought patterns concerning inward development This is where the research in this volume sets in leading to the hypothesis that inward development in the main settlement areas of Switzerland is possible but that the existing formal instruments of spatial planning themselves are insufficient for this purpose An estimation of the reserves in the Swiss Plateau shows that there is a theoretical capacity for accommodating around 0.51 million additional inhabitants there is without having to adjust the formal instruments Around two thirds of all reserves are located in small and medium sized municipalities with fewer than 10 000 inhabitants which moreover make up 93% of all administrative units of the Swiss Plateau In addition it is estimated that half of the floor area reserves lie on already built up though underused plots In the main settlement area of Switzerland a systematic density eschewal is taking place in small and medium sized municipalities In order to help inward development achieve a breakthrough in the main settlement area in Switzerland informal procedures are needed in these municipal categories that result in a revision of local planning In doing so informal procedures should not negate the specific organisational form of small and medium sized municipalities namely the militia system of governance but should rather adapt to this principle An inward development compass brings together the knowledge existing in the militia system of governance forming the informal prelude to the local planning revision of the third generation in small and medium sized municipalities The inception of the revised spatial planning law and its stipulations on inward development and densification confronts the three large scale areas of Switzerland with different challenges Yet driven by changes in the fields of demographics energy and finances the initial problems will manifest themselves most clearly in the Swiss Plateau If the required transformation process is to succeed a more pronounced orientation of policy and spatial planning towards the initial problems in small and medium sized municipalities is necessary
