

Predicting Products of Chemical Reactions

This worksheet is designed to help you predict products of sample reactions of the four basic reaction types (synthesis, decomposition, single replacement, and double replacement), and use of solubility rules.

For the first three reactions, the type of reaction is listed, you are to provide the products, chemical formula, and name, parentheses for acids are used. For the last two, the type of reaction is not listed, you are to determine it, and then provide the products. Many of these reactions fall into the category of redox reactions, though do not let that confuse you, each can be described in terms of the four basic reaction types. Complete the reactions, as indicated.

Although some of the reactants and products are very important as well, careful attention should always be given to identifying these, for they are products. However, as you write products, always include the state symbols given. This particular instruction is the only change of type and that characterizes this worksheet from other parts of your course, so be sure to include the symbols, as required.
