Abstract—This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 30-min, 3 times per week, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the health-related quality of life (HRQL) of older adults. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The study population was 100 older adults (60–75 years old) who were recruited from a senior center. The study was divided into two groups: an intervention group and a control group. The intervention group participated in a 12-week, 30-min, 3 times per week, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program. The control group did not participate in any exercise program. The HRQL was measured using the EuroQol-5D questionnaire at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the intervention group had a significant improvement in HRQL compared to the control group at 12 weeks. The findings suggest that a low-impact aerobically and resistance training program can improve the HRQL of older adults.
