With completing the first term in the Constructed Self class, I was able to benefit from a variety of new things from the class, as well as refresh my memory on things that I already knew, just needed a reminder about.

The biggest hurdle in the class for me was time management. I am a procrastinator and always have been, so completing assignments on time was and still is a challenge for me. I have not come to a full solution to this problem yet, but I did make changes in my life as to how I can manage time management. I found that it was easier for me to focus on homework if I was outside my dorm room, because when in my dorm, I would usually mess around on the internet or take naps. I don't think realistically I will get over procrastination anytime soon, but I can manage it.

With hurdles came hidden strengths I discovered about myself. I've never thought of myself as a leader, but because the class used group thinking in more than one occasion, I found that I am a good leader. I communicate my ideas to the group while trying to balance the ideas of others so the group can come to an agreed upon decision. Obviously this can benefit me no matter what career I decide to go into, because the ability to take control of a situation and still remain diplomatic with colleagues is a valuable asset to have. Other than this, I can't think of any other strength I discovered. I

The End of Composition Studies David W Smit, 2007-03-29 Setting forth an innovative new model for what it means to be a writing teacher in the era of writing across the curriculum The End of Composition Studies urges a reconceptualization of graduate work in rhetoric and composition systematically critiques the limitations of current pedagogical practices at the postsecondary level and proposes a reorganization of all academic units David W Smit calls into question two major assumptions of the field that writing is a universal ability and that college level writing is foundational to advanced learning Instead Smit holds writing involves a wide range of knowledge and skill that cannot be learned solely in writing classes but must be acquired by immersion in various discourse communities in and out of academic settings The End of Composition Studies provides a compelling rhetoric and rationale for eliminating the field and reenvisioning the profession as truly interdisciplinary a change that is necessary in order to fulfill the needs and demands of students instructors

How Students Write: A Linguistic Analysis Laura Louise Aull, 2020-04-01

Broad generalizations about people today are a familiar feature of first year student writing. How Students Write brings a fresh perspective to this perennial observation using corpus linguistics techniques. This study analyzes sentence level patterns in student writing to develop an understanding of how students present evidence, draw connections between ideas, relate to their readers, and ultimately learn to construct knowledge in their writing. Drawing on both first year and upper level student writing, the book examines the discourse of students at different points in their education. It also distinguishes between argumentative and analytic essays to explore the way school genres and assignments shape students' choices. In focusing on sentence level features such as hedges, perhaps, and boosters, definitely, this study shows how such rhetorical choices work together to open or close opportunities for thoughtful exchanges of ideas. Attention to these features can help instructors foster civil discourse, design effective assignments, and expose and question norms of higher education.

Teaching Race Stephen D. Brookfield, 2018-11-20 A real world how to manual for talking about race in the classroom. Educators and activists frequently call for the need to address the lingering presence of racism in higher education. Yet few books offer specific suggestions and advice on how to introduce race to students who believe we live in a post racial world where racism is no longer a real issue. In Teaching Race, the authors offer practical tools and techniques for teaching and discussing racial issues at predominately White institutions of higher education. As current events highlight the dynamics surrounding race and racism on campus and the world beyond, this book provides teachers with essential training to facilitate productive discussion and raise racial awareness in the classroom. A variety of teaching and learning experts provide insights, tips, and guidance on running classroom discussions on race. They present effective approaches and activities to bring reluctant students into a consideration of race and explore how White teachers can model racial awareness, thereby inviting students into the process of examining their own white identity. Racism, whether evident in overt displays or subconscious bias, has repercussions that reverberate far beyond the campus grounds. As the cultural climate increasingly calls out for more research, education, and dialogue on race and racism, this book helps teachers spotlight issues related to race in a way that leads to effective classroom and campus conversation. The book provides guidance on how to create the conditions that facilitate respectful racial dialogue by building trust and effectively negotiating conflict. Uncover each student's own subconscious bias and the intersectionality that exists even in the most homogenous appearing classrooms. Help students embrace discomfort and adapt discussion methods to accommodate issues of race and positionality. Avoid common traps, mistakes, and misconceptions encountered in anti racist teaching. Predominantly White institutions face a number of challenges in dealing with race issues, including a lack of precedence, an absence of modeling by campus leaders, and little clear guidance on how teachers can identify and challenge racism on campus. Teaching Race is packed with activities, suggestions, and exercises to provide practical, real world help for teachers trying to introduce race in class.
