Abstract

At Budapest-Norim, police investigating the Munich terror later stated that when major European and Middle Eastern terrorist organizations met in a hotel near Munich-Norim there was a clear intention to coordinate and plan to get involved in the war in Europe. However, at the time a small number of local professional intelligence officers were following SOGAL before the Hungarian invasion and there was no information government was aware of regarding another foreign agent activity which was occurring in the area. From investigations conducted in the past and reports received from the SOGAL, it was concluded that the SOGAL was active in the area.

On December 7, 1944, Japanese forces landed near the town of Manabanan, Samar, and on the next day, December 8, the American forces engaged the Japanese forces in a battle. The American forces were defeated and the Japanese forces were victorious. The Japanese forces were able to capture the town of Manabanan and the surrounding area. The American forces were forced to retreat and the Japanese forces were able to establish a base of operations in the area. The Japanese forces were able to maintain their position in the area for several months. The American forces were unable to retake the town of Manabanan and the surrounding area. The Japanese forces were able to use the town of Manabanan as a base of operations for their operations in the area. The American forces were unable to do so. The Japanese forces were able to use the town of Manabanan as a base of operations for their operations in the area. The American forces were unable to do so.
