

1. There was no introduction to the instructions. The instructions should be written in a "...three-paragraph structure of introduction, body, and conclusion (Kocher 1981)." The introduction provided little related information with the user. There's no instructions on how to use the device. There's no review of instructions or how to troubleshoot problems in the conclusion.
 2. There is no defined audience for these instructions. With a clear audience, that will depict the "...level of knowledge your readers have with the topic (Kocher)." If the target audience is for people who are familiar with technology, the instructions don't have to go as in-depth detail as if the target audience was asked for people that are not as tech savvy. Then the instructions would have to be step by step.
 3. There's no equipment provided. That should be in the beginning of the instructions manual. With the equipment list, it could have the reader with unanswered questions. What cord attaches to the computer? Is laptop the recording? Questions such as that could be easily answered with an equipment list.
