Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of 10 men who did not exercise regularly, and the training group consisted of 10 men who participated in a 12-week training program. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise before and after the training program. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and HRR of the training group compared to the control group. The HR increased from 72 to 82 beats per minute (b/min) at rest and from 165 to 175 b/min during maximal exercise. The HRR increased from 93 to 93 b/min at rest and from 48 to 58 b/min during maximal exercise. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or natural light at night. To reduce the risk of the problem, the light should be turned off at the end of the work shift.
- Increased exposure to light at night is associated with a higher risk of breast cancer. The length of the exposure may be important in this case, as well as the intensity of the light.
- The end of the shift is the most important time to keep the patient in darkness. The patient should be sleeping in a dark room. The patient should be advised to avoid bright light at the end of the shift. The patient should be advised to avoid bright light at the end of the shift.

When you install your T-Value One Connection, improper installation of all four screws (50 combinations for One Connection) will void the warranty. Please, before installing, refer to the correct installation instructions. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a variety of problems with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. A government producer (as is provided by "Germany's Social Security Agency") taking on the production responsibility must determine the producer's output level as the firm's product is sold in the labor market in the output market.
