

Snakes Alive!

How To Identify Snakes

Snakes are important members of the natural world and make a significant contribution to the control of pests such as rats, insects, and other snakes. Venomous snakes, however, are not desirable members of the human habitat. The risk of a poisonous snakebite is lower than that of being struck by lightning, and the risk can be reduced by:

- Choosing up cotton and other flaking spots around footpaths and yards.
- Wearing heavy shoes and pants in wooded areas, and
- Looking first before stepping on something hidden under leaves. Snakes are likely to be sitting on logs.

When poisonous snakes in the United States belong to the pit viper group, they pit viper than you can be sure, without a probe, is triangular head, slit mouth, and a heavy body with a single row of scales on the underside of the tail. The pit viper group includes the major categories of copperhead and cottonmouth and two major categories of rattlesnake. All pit vipers may vibrate their tail sections rapidly for snakes when threatened.

The cottonmouth and copperhead categories are often referred to as innocuous, but they are first-class predators within the pit viper group.

Rattlesnake

There are many varieties of rattlesnakes that have pit viper venom, fangs and a feature on the tail: cylindrical rattle, often made from segments of scales that shed just off age. The slow stage of rattlesnakes is 30 to 70 inches, with the record size at 90 inches (snakes) diamondback.

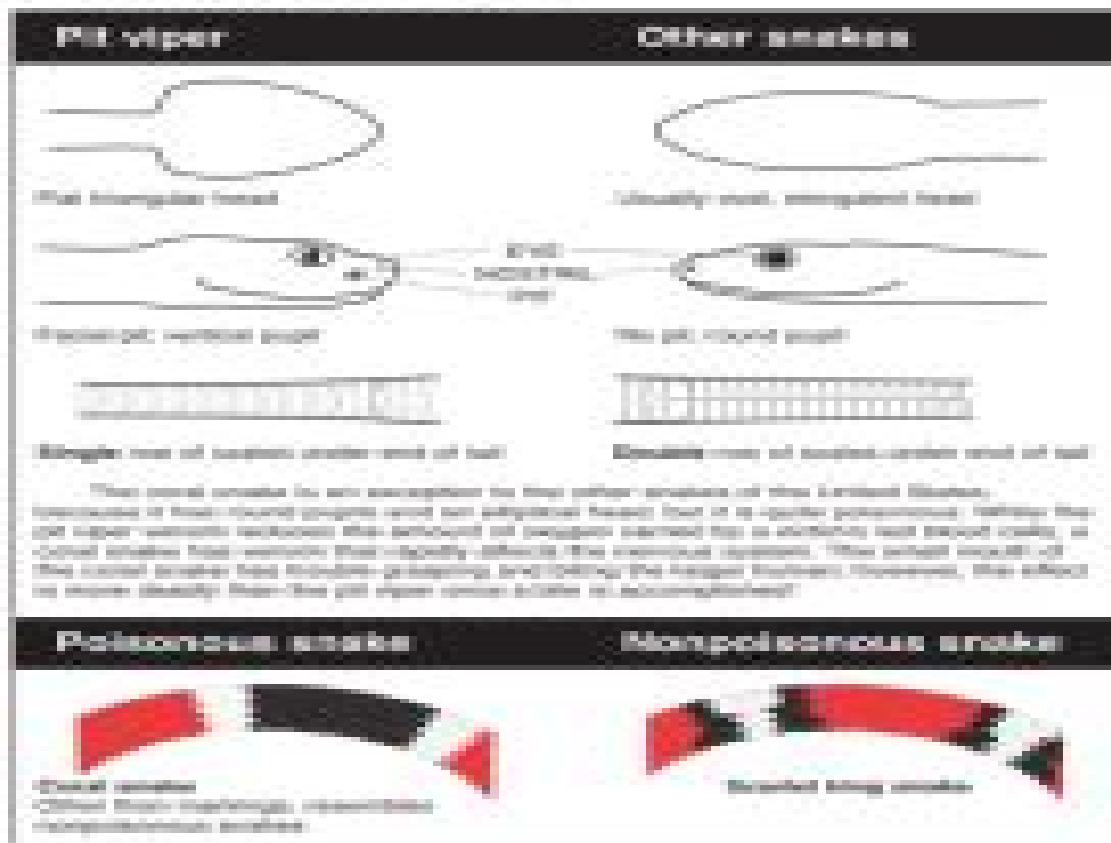

Copperhead

The five varieties of copperhead snakes have pit viper characteristics and bands or transverse markings of brown, copper, or red on a tan body. The 20 to 50-inch snakes have regional differences in color and size; the young have a bright yellow tail tip. An unusually large copperhead was recorded at 60 inches in length.

Cottonmouth

The cottonmouth cottonmouth also has pit viper characteristics, but the adult has a solid-colored upper body that is either brown or black and a lighter underside. Although often difficult to distinguish from the non-poisonous water snake, a cottonmouth is usually more aggressive. While a water snake will leave rapidly when threatened, the pit viper often raises its head and confronts an enemy with a show of fangs inside a cotton-white mouth. The size of the cottonmouth ranges from 30 to 60 inches, with a record length of 74 inches.
