Making Global Value Chains Work for Development Daria Taglioni, Deborah Winkler, 2016-06-10 Economic technological and political shifts as well as changing business strategies have driven firms to unbundle production processes and disperse them across countries Thanks to these changes developing countries can now increase their participation in global value chains GVCs and thus become more competitive in agriculture manufacturing and services This is a paradigm shift from the 20th century when countries had to build the entire supply chain domestically to become competitive internationally For policymakers the focus is on boosting domestic value added and improving access to resources and technology while advancing development goals However participating in global value chains does not automatically improve living standards and social conditions in a country This requires not only improving the quality and quantity of production factors and redressing market failures but also engineering equitable distributions of opportunities and outcomes including employment wages work conditions economic rights gender equality economic security and protecting the environment The internationalization of production processes helps with very few of these development challenges Following this perspective Making Global Value Chains Work for Development offers a strategic framework analytical tools and policy options to address this challenge The book conceptualizes GVCs and makes it easier for policymakers and practitioners to discuss them and their implications for development It shows why GVCs require fresh thinking it serves as a repository of analytical tools and it proposes a strategic framework to guide policymakers in identifying the key objectives of GVC participation and in selecting suitable economic strategies to achieve them

Rewriting the Rules of the American Economy Joseph E. Stiglitz, 2015-10-22 It's time to rewrite the rules to curb the runaway flow of wealth to the top one percent to restore security and opportunity for the middle class and to foster stronger growth rooted in broadly shared prosperity Inequality is a choice The United States bills itself as the land of opportunity a place where anyone can achieve success and a better life through hard work and determination But the facts tell a different story the U S today lags behind most other developed nations in measures of inequality and economic mobility For decades wages have stagnated for the majority of workers while economic gains have disproportionately gone to the top one percent Education housing and health care essential ingredients for individual success are growing ever more expensive Deeply rooted structural discrimination continues to hold down women and people of color and more than one fifth of all American children now live in poverty These trends are on track to become even worse in the future Some economists claim that today's bleak conditions are inevitable consequences of market outcomes globalization and technological progress If we want greater equality they argue we have to sacrifice growth This is simply not true American inequality is the result of misguided structural rules that actually constrict economic growth We have stripped away worker protections and family support systems created a tax system that rewards short term gains over long term investment offered a de facto public safety net too big to fail financial institutions and chosen monetary and fiscal policies that promote wealth over full employment
