Global Play Movement Sweeps across 140 Countries

The first International Day of Play, hailed as a groundbreaking event for children's well-being, is scheduled to take place on 11 June. This historic day comes after a dedicated campaign urging the United Nations (UN) to designate play as an essential part of every child's life.

The UN, an internationally acclaimed organization fostering global unity, has long upheld a treaty that enshrines the rights of children, including their right to play. Yet, according to the children's charity UNICEF, millions of children around the world are unable to fulfil this fundamental activity. Astonishingly, it is estimated that approximately 100 million children currently find themselves engaged in such rather than learning to

OLYMPICS 2024:

But a 2007 study comparing health care use between American adults diagnosed as LGBT and those who were straight found no differences. Health care use, including hospitalizations, emergency room visits, and doctor visits, was similar for both groups. The researchers also found that LGBT people were more likely to be hospitalized for mental health issues, but this was not statistically significant.
