Burdon, 2023-05-24 This book introduces the concept of the Anthropocene and examines its importance for environmental legal thinking research and practice Two main arguments are explored The first is that much of the scholarship in environmental law that addresses the Anthropocene does not respond to Earth systems science or the difference in scale as we move from local to global systems Key examples include a focus on anthropocentrism attempts to constitutionalise environmental protections the prevalence of legal rights and the idea of ecological integrity The second argument is that these points of focus derive from the prevalence of idealism in environmental legal scholarship Idealism in this context does not refer to naivety or the presentation of unrealistic goals Rather this book is concerned with idealism as a philosophical commitment to the power of ideas to determine reality and drive future change As expressed in legal scholarship this book also argues that idealism involves an abstraction from material reality and a refusal to directly engage those forces that have given rise to the Anthropocene In response this book uses a method of critique to uncover the presumptions and presuppositions that underlie environmental scholarship As a counter to idealism it also sketches out a framework for materialism in the Anthropocene This book's engagement with these questions will appeal to undergraduate and postgraduate students in law politics philosophy or the ecological humanities It will also be of interest to academics in these disciplines and libraries around the world The Behavioral Sciences and Health Care Olle Jane Z. Department of the Air Force, 2000 Disability and Labour in the Twentieth Century Radu Harald Dinu, Staffan Bengtsson, 2022-12-30 This volume puts disability and labour at the centre of historical enquiry It offers fresh perspectives on the history of disability and labour in the twentieth century and highlights the need to address the topic beyond regional boundaries Bringing together historians and disability scholars from a variety of disciplines and regions the chapters investigate various historical settings ranging from work cooperatives to disability associations and informal workplaces and analyse multiple meanings of labour in different political and economic systems through the lens of disability The book s contributors demonstrate that the nexus between labour and disability in modern industrialised societies resists easy generalisations as marginalisation and integration were often two sides of the same coin While the experience of many disabled people has been marked by exclusion from mainstream production labour also became a vehicle for integration and emancipation Addressing one of the research gaps of the disability history field which has long been dominated by British and North American perspectives the book sheds light on less studied examples from Scandinavian countries and Eastern Europe including Czechoslovakia Poland the Soviet Union Bulgaria and Romania Cutting across national cultural and class divides the volume provides a springboard for reflections on common experiences of disability and labour during the twentieth century It will be of interest to all scholars and students working in the field of disability studies sociology and labour history Advances in Production Management Systems.
