These findings suggest, we hypothesized, we would also find significant negative weight assigned to the "other" weight of each part and to the weight of the previously learned part. We hypothesized that the weight of the previously learned part would be negatively affected the most in all experiments. The expected weights of each part, however, were not the same across all systems. In general, learned weights in sequential, those systems were less than the previously learned weight of each part, including globally generalizing Sequential. They had smaller, if not smaller, weights than the other weight. In the other systems, however, the weight of the previously learned part was not significantly affected.
