throughout the wetlands and waterways Europe and Asia Once hunted extensively for the pot its numbers have recovered and it is now one of our commonest species of waterfowl A flagship species for wetland conservation the Teal is also an excellent model species for ecological research and this forms the spine of this new Poyser monograph The Teal looks at distribution and trends in numbers foraging ecology breeding behaviour population dynamics management and conservation of teal looking at both the Eurasian Common Teal and its North American equivalent the Green winged Teal which until relatively recently was considered to be the same species The book provides a scientifically robust account on which wetland managers research scientists and the ornithological community may rely with wider implications for the conservation and management of other waterfowl and for ecological research in general

Using household consumption and expenditure surveys to make inferences about food consumption, nutrient intakes and nutrition status Fiedler, John L., Mwangi, Dena M., 2016-11-21 Household consumption and expenditure surveys HCES are multipurpose surveys that are routinely conducted to collect data on household food consumption and availability in more than 120 countries HCES are increasingly being used to calculate proxy estimates of food consumption nutrient intakes and nutrition status often at the individual level Rarely however do they collect information on meal participation despite growing evidence that it is an increasingly important and variable component of the quantity of food consumed or available in a household This paper explores the significance of adjusting for meal participation in making inferences about apparent food consumption and nutrient intakes It focuses on two distinct sets of additional information requirements for enhancing the reliability and precision of measures of food consumption 1 individual household members and household guests meal eating behaviors and 2 the number and apparent nutritional significance of meals While the most comprehensive and precise accounting of intakes of individual food consumption and nutrients requires both types of information the magnitude of the changes required in HCES questionnaires to capture them is likely to be prohibitive Consequently for many HCES a second best approach may be the most effective method at least in the short term The paper empirically explores some of the relatively few HCES that currently attempt to capture some of these information requirements In addition it assesses their value added to prioritize the global agenda for strengthening HCES measurement of food consumption in support of more evidence based nutrition policy making
