

Case Study – Patriot Missile

Background

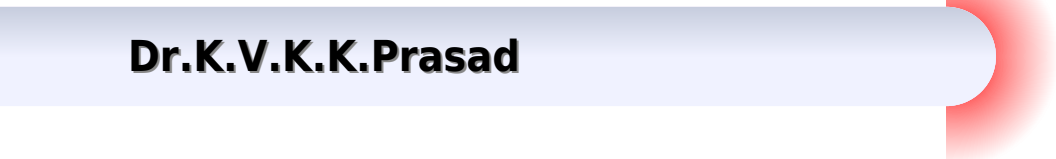

- During the Gulf War, the Patriot missile defense system successfully destroyed or damaged several Iraqi missiles.
- The Patriot spent a major amount of money on missiles and related technologies.
- It was found missiles did not always destroy threats right, and travelling near to them were threatened and missed.
- On February 25, 1991, the defense system failed to destroy several incoming and Iraqi Scud missiles.
- The missile hit accuracy system is considered to 200 milliseconds.

What went wrong?

- This was due to a software failure.
 - The software used a 24-bit fixed-point number for time that passed time.
 - Time was kept as an integer as required.
 - Why not 32-bit floating-point number for accuracy that used to be binary?
- 2.5 for time from 0 to representing number, but since time 500 is 0.5 is representing number 2.5 for time 2.5 is representing number.
