Marshall's organization is a relatively young organization. The members are expected to be 18 or older and have attained at least an intermediate-high-school or college degree. However, members need not be students or college graduates. The club was the first in the United States that gave boys aged as low as 16 the opportunity to learn the principles of the program, and that engaged in meaningful service projects. As the organization's membership, programs, and the financial resources supporting the program grew, the program's membership was limited only to those in the United States and invited speakers, but had no contact with those that sought entrance. The club was founded by the general manager, the general staff, and the general manager. The general staff, the general manager, and the general manager were the only ones who were involved in the program.

But persistent shortages of essential goods and services were reported in the general budget study of 1990, which at that time indicated that about 20 percent of the population was unable to afford basic necessities. The government has since taken steps to improve the situation, but shortages of essential goods and services remain a problem in some areas.

Multi-Sector Engagement Initiatives is currently only implemented in countries where there is a significant number of stakeholders.
