*The study of literature is an essential component of a well-rounded education. It provides students with a deeper understanding of the human condition, the social and cultural contexts in which we live, and the power of language to shape our world. Through the study of literature, students can develop critical thinking skills, enhance their communication abilities, and gain a greater appreciation for the diversity of human experience. This course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive overview of the field of literature, from ancient times to the present day. It will explore the works of major authors, the development of literary genres, and the ways in which literature has been used to reflect and shape society. Students will be encouraged to engage in thoughtful analysis and discussion of the texts, and to develop their own interpretations and insights. By the end of the course, students should have a solid foundation in the study of literature and be prepared to continue their exploration of this rich and rewarding field.

Abstract: Objective: Little is known about the prevalence of common mental disorders in the elderly. The purpose of this study was to estimate the prevalence of common mental disorders in the elderly. Design: Cross-sectional study. Setting: A community-based study. Participants: A sample of 1,000 elderly people. Measurements and Main Results: The prevalence of common mental disorders was estimated using the Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS) and the Geriatric Anxiety Inventory (GAI). The prevalence of common mental disorders was 12.5% in the elderly. The prevalence of common mental disorders was higher in women than in men. The prevalence of common mental disorders was higher in those with a history of mental illness than in those without a history of mental illness. Conclusions: The prevalence of common mental disorders in the elderly is 12.5%. The prevalence of common mental disorders is higher in women than in men. The prevalence of common mental disorders is higher in those with a history of mental illness than in those without a history of mental illness.
