Headquarters in One State Stephen G. Lind, 2008 The National Guard has been in a nearly constant state of change in one form or another since its inception The events that have transpired since the attacks on the World Trade Center on 11 September 2001 demonstrated the need for the next major evolution of the National Guard The National Guard began the process of transforming the State Military Headquarters in all 54 states and territories by converting from an Administrative and Oversight Headquarters to a Joint Operational Activity in 2003 This study investigates the changes brought about by the implementation of the joint planning process with relation to the transformation to Joint Force headquarters in California It explores the impact of the joint planning process to current operational plans within California and the challenges and successes experienced during the process In doing so it focuses on the effects the JFHQ transformation process has had in California One critical component to operating in a joint environment is the ability for the organization to conduct Joint Planning using the Joint Operation Planning and Execution System JOPES format All of the existing plans for each state would have to be updated and converted to the JOPES format adding to the challenges of learning a new planning format and training planners to use the new format This study finds that resourcing has been the most significant challenge to the transformation process with regards to joint planning The planning staff within the J 5 has suffered from a lack of sufficient personnel to conduct both strategic and operational planning simultaneously Strategic planning has been extremely effective while operational planning has produced mixed results Personnel within the joint staff have not been trained on the Joint Operations Planning Process JOPP which further hampers its operational planning capability The lack of trained planners has slowed attempts to update and transition current on the shelf plans from The Management of Security Cooperation, 2017 Strategy Richard J Bailey, James W Forsyth, Mark O Yeisley, 2016-04-15 How does one engage in the study of strategy Strategy Context and Adaptation from Archidamus to Airpower argues that strategy is not just concerned with amassing knowledge it is also about recognizing our imperfect understanding of the environment and respecting the complex nature of adaptation to the unforeseen or unexpected In essence the strongest strategists are those who commit to an education that cultivates a more holistic and adaptive way of thinking With that thought in mind the contributors to Strategy each a current or former professor at the School of Advanced Air and Space Studies widely considered the Department of Defense s premier school of strategy offer ways of thinking strategically about a variety of subject matters from classical history to cyber power Practitioners in the profession of arms perhaps more than any other profession must employ critical thinking where the application of power on land at sea in the air and in space and cyberspace are concerned Strategy examines various sub disciplines regarding the use of power and illuminates different approaches to thinking which have implications beyond the implementation of force Professional Journal of the United States Army, 2015 Raising Thinking from the Tactical to the Operational Level United States. Design Jeffrey M. Reilly, 2011 Joint Operation Planning M. G. Mullen, 2013-03-07 Joint operation planning consists of planning activities associated with joint military operations by combatant commanders CCDRs and their subordinate joint force commanders JFCs in response to contingencies and crises. It transforms national strategic objectives into activities by development of operational products that include planning for the mobilization deployment employment sustainment redeployment and demobilization of joint forces. Strategic direction is the common thread that integrates and synchronizes the planning activities and operations of the Joint Staff JS combatant commands CCMDs Services JFCs combat support agencies CSAs and other Department of Defense DOD agencies. It provides purpose and focus to the planning for employment of military force. As an overarching term, strategic direction encompasses the processes and manner by which the President and the Secretary of Defense SecDef provide strategic guidance to the joint force. Joint operation planning occurs within Adaptive Planning and Execution APEX, which is the department level system of joint policies, processes, procedures, and reporting structures. APEX is supported by communications and information technology that is used by the joint planning and execution community JPEC to monitor, plan, and execute mobilization, deployment, employment, sustainment, redeployment, and demobilization activities associated with joint operations. APEX formally integrates the planning activities of the JPEC and facilitates the JFC's seamless transition from planning to execution during times of crisis. APEX activities span many organizational levels, but the focus is on the interaction between SecDef and CCDRs, which ultimately helps the President and SecDef decide when, where, and how to commit US military forces. In conducting joint operation planning, commanders and staff apply operational art to operational design using the joint operation planning process JOPP. Planners apply operational design to provide the conceptual framework that will underpin joint operation or campaign plans and their subsequent execution. The application of operational art and operational design further reduces uncertainty and adequately orders complex problems to allow for more detailed planning. The planning staff uses JOPP to conduct detailed planning to fully develop options, identify resources, and identify and mitigate risk. Planners develop the concept of operations CONOPS, force plans, deployment plans, and supporting plans that contain multiple options in order to provide the flexibility to adapt to changing conditions and remain consistent with the JFC's intent. Joint operation planning plays a fundamental role in securing the Nation's interests in a continuously changing operational environment. Through structured review, assessment, and modification, plans are constantly assessed and updated by the JFC and reviewed by the broader JPEC and senior DOD leadership. The open and collaborative planning process provides common understanding across multiple levels of organizations and the basis for adaptation and change. This publication reflects current guidance for planning military operations and as a keystone publication forms the core of joint doctrine for joint operation planning throughout the range of military operations.
