Words, phrases, or sentences that reveal the atmosphere of the story include the following: steep slopes and the wild tangle of undergrowth, pouring through the tree trunk and booming through the whistling and clinking of the wind and the restless bending of the branches; dark forest; wind-swept wind or night-breeze of the woods; wind among the branches that would seem to sweep through the dark forest; Monera's own windows overlooked them both a fierce stink of the storm had been answered by a splashing crash and their heads, and now they could leap inside, in case of falling branch now had rained down upon them; in the cold, gloomy forest, with the wind tearing in glist'g gusts through the naked branches and whistling round the tree trunks; Monera.

Answers will vary.

3. What are the men doing when the story begins?

The men are protecting their property with their foresters, looking for poachers and trespassers.

4. Share the events of the meeting of the two enemies.

When the men meet, each states to the other with "there is no peace and murder agreement in his mind." At that moment, a branch now falls and traps both of them.
