Reviewed article: Peter, Uno, "Accountability and Administrators: Value Systems and their Value in the Public Domain", Societal Integrity, Spring, 2010, Vol. 12, No. 6, pp. 337-345.

The article, "Accountability and Administrators: Value Systems and their Value in the Public Domain", by Uno Peter looks into addressing how value systems and accountability interact in all of the decisions given by public administrators. The problem addressed in this research is whether administrators are void of accountability for decisions, including various influences which can impact their decisions.

It is clear from the article abstract that the issue is not simple. As a matter of fact, the article is quite confusing, especially in its first two paragraphs. The writer started by explaining that ethical codes of referential systems become easier to hold accountability for individuals, especially when it comes to their actions. However, an issue emerges when the moral values of an individual tend to become different from the accountability policies. What make accountability even more complicated are the goals of the administrator, as well as the inability of an individual to perceive consequences in the future.

Another potential influence is the existence of an actual social context. The different domains lay down the standards of behavior. This social environment can help a certain individual in determining a good decision in contrast to a bad one. At the same time, it also complicates the concept of accountability.

Overall, the article is not very straightforward at the start. It is not only until the second page when you realized the focus of the article. Once a reader understands the good examples, the point is taken.

A Step-by-Step Guide to Conducting an Integrative Review Coleen E. Toronto, Ruth Remington, 2020-02-17 This book provides guidance to readers for how to conduct an integrative review Over the decades with the expansion of evidence based practice EBP the evolution of methods used in reviews has resulted in a wide spectrum of review types Due to the overlapping characteristics of the various review methods confusion exists related to terminology descriptions and methods of each type To fill this gap this book examines components necessary to conduct a rigorous integrative review from formulating questions through dissemination of the results of the review Each chapter focuses on one component or step in this process and is written in a straightforward and readable manner An integrative review is considered by many as an actual research study hence it should be approached following established research methods involving well defined steps The integrative review is often compared with the systematic review Both are used in healthcare research and follow a systematic process in reviewing literature and developing recommendations but there are important differences that are addressed in the book Evidence based practice EBP demands high quality rigorous evidence for nurse clinicians to make informed decisions with and for their patients In nursing education the integrative review is a frequent capstone project for graduate students and forms the basis for many doctoral projects The Integrative review process should be valid reliable and transparent and this book provides clear guidelines for writing an integrative review for students educators clinicians and researchers This book is a useful addition to courses for both undergraduate and graduate level writers of integrative reviews In academia a likely adoption would be in graduate research and research methods courses and baccalaureate honor courses
