Investment in the Future

- Do not expect that appropriate communication of statistics is best achieved by increasing the number of statistical channels.
- Do not expect that the appropriate communication methods are the appropriate ones, and this can result in a lot of wasted time.
- Do not expect that appropriate communication is a simple task.
- Research has shown that a well-planned communication process can be a very effective way to communicate statistical data. This is especially true for the most important, highly visible, and complex data. However, this research is not about what is best, but about what is best for the most important data.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40 to 50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 10 years. They were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 70% of the maximum HR. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR increased from 72 to 80 beats per minute (b·min⁻¹) and the HRR increased from 28 to 36 b·min⁻¹. The control group showed no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output, and if the price falls, the producer will want to produce less of the output.
