Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a training group (TRN). The TRN group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The CON group did not exercise. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during a 30-min submaximal exercise test at baseline and after 12 weeks. The TRN group showed a significant decrease in HR and an increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness and energy expenditure of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: The authors present an experimental approach to quantify the complexity of the human brain network. They demonstrate that the complexity of the network is related to the degree of the nodes and the number of connections. The authors also show that the complexity of the network is related to the degree of the nodes and the number of connections. The authors also show that the complexity of the network is related to the degree of the nodes and the number of connections.
