Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or other medical problems. They were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group did not exercise. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and EE of the subjects. The HR increased from 68 to 72 beats per minute at rest and from 148 to 152 beats per minute during exercise. The EE increased from 1.2 to 1.4 kcal per minute at rest and from 2.8 to 3.2 kcal per minute during exercise. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or natural light at night. To reduce the risk of the problem, the light should be turned off at the end of the work shift.
- Increased exposure to light at night is commonly associated with sleep disturbance and sleep deprivation, the length of the work shift may also be important for the risk of sleep deprivation.
- The end of night shift work is frequently the time when the greatest sleep deprivation occurs. The prevalence of sleep deprivation is highest among night shift workers and is higher for those working at night than for those working at day or evening shift. Sleep deprivation is associated with the risk of a fall.

When you install your T-Value One Connection, improper installation of all four screws (50 combinations for One Connection) will void the warranty. Please, before installing, refer to the correct installation instructions. Failure to maintain proper ventilation may result in a variety of problems with the product.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output level accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will want to produce more of the output, and if the price falls, the producer will want to produce less of the output.
