 5. Whether Court of Appeal rightly deemed the 1st respondent as having been duly elected President of the Federal Republic of Nigeria by majority of valid lawful votes of 24,638,063 in the face of the three conflicting "final" results of the election which the 4th and 6th respondents were unable to explain or reconcile by their pleadings or by evidence at the trial.

 - (iv) Allowing extraneous political considerations to affect then judgment to the prejudice of the petitioners. (Grounds 17, 18, 26, 33, 37 and 39).
 - (v) Disallowing the petitioners' independent witnesses on subpoena from testifying on ground that their depositions were not front-loaded at the time of filing of the petition. (Ground 1, 2 and 4 of interlocutory appeal)."
- The 1st and 2nd respondents formulated the following ten issues for determination:
- "(i) Upon a dispassionate interpretation of section 145(d) of the Electoral Act, 2006, whether the appellants who complained of total exclusion from participation in the election could still rightly challenge the outcome of the election under any of the grounds stated in section 145(l)(a), (b) and (c) of the same Electoral Act.
 - (ii) Considering the fact that the objection raised to the competence of the appeal was/is jurisdictional, coupled with the fact that the lower court did not dispose of the merits of the said objection in its ruling of 20 September 2007, whether it can rightly be said that the said objection has been caught by issue estoppel to exclude the valid pronouncement made on it by the lower court in its final judgment.
