Neuropsychology of Women Erin Sullivan-Baca, Rachael L. Ellison, 2025-05-15 Women have long been underrepresented in scientific research which has limited our understanding of how they may be uniquely impacted by various medical psychological and neurocognitive conditions Due to this limitation neuropsychological training and practice has historically fallen short of acknowledging potential sex and gender differences and effectively incorporating this knowledge into evaluations and treatment recommendations Fortunately in recent years contemporary research has begun to draw more focus on unique biopsychosocial factors impacting the epidemiology presentation neurocognitive profile and treatment implications for women with neuropsychological concerns In an age of increased focus on diversity equity and inclusion DEI in the field of neuropsychology compounded by the background of everchanging socio political factors in the U S either supporting or opposing this focus it is crucial that clinical neuropsychologists gain the knowledge and skills to provide individualized gender informed care to women patients It is imperative for neuropsychology as a specialty to champion this initiative as leading experts in the intersection of cognition mental health and disorders pertaining to the brain which has the potential to inform clinical practice and research in related fields such as medicine and neuroscience Neuropsychology of Women Considerations for Clinical Care Research provides an overview of the current research informed knowledge base on how different conditions encountered in neuropsychological practice uniquely present in women patients Chapters are authored by some of the foremost neuropsychological researchers and clinicians of today spanning topics inclusive of both those impacting both genders with a focus on the understudied and unique clinical implications related to women as well as those disproportionately affecting women These range from specific neurodegenerative conditions such as Alzheimer s disease and movement disorders to acute events like stroke and traumatic brain injury to chronic conditions including autoimmune disorders and epilepsy all consolidating the literature into a concise and accessible format Chapters focusing on chronic health conditions and issues relating to pregnancy and menopause supplement those focused on neurological conditions to help clinical providers conceptualize patients through a comprehensive neuropsychological lens and to help researchers understand where opportunities lie for further exploration For those new to the field of neuropsychology including students and trainees Neuropsychology of Women Considerations for Clinical Care Research extends beyond traditional texts to incorporate issues of DEI through an intentional and organic approach This is the first book of its kind in over a decade and the most comprehensive resource available to clinical neuropsychologists seeking to provide the highest standard of inclusive practice to women patients

Sports-Related Concussions in Youth National Research Council, Institute of Medicine, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on Sports-Related Concussions in Youth, 2014-02-04 In the past decade few subjects at the intersection of medicine and sports have generated as much public interest as sports related concussions especially among youth Despite growing awareness of sports related concussions and campaigns to educate athletes coaches physicians and parents of young athletes about concussion recognition and management confusion and controversy persist in many areas Currently diagnosis is based primarily on the symptoms reported by the individual rather than on objective diagnostic markers and there is little empirical evidence for the optimal degree and duration of physical rest needed to promote recovery or the best timing and approach for returning to full physical activity Sports Related Concussions in Youth Improving the Science Changing the Culture reviews the science of sports related concussions in youth from elementary school through young adulthood as well as in military personnel and their dependents This report recommends actions that can be taken by a range of audiences including research funding agencies legislatures state and school superintendents and athletic directors military organizations and equipment manufacturers as well as youth who participate in sports and their parents to improve what is known about concussions and to reduce their occurrence Sports Related Concussions in Youth finds that while some studies provide useful information much remains unknown about the extent of concussions in youth how to diagnose manage and prevent concussions and the short and long term consequences of concussions as well as repetitive head impacts that do not result in concussion symptoms The culture of sports negatively influences athletes self reporting of concussion symptoms and their adherence to return to play guidance Athletes their teammates and in some cases coaches and parents may not fully appreciate the health threats posed by concussions Similarly military recruits are immersed in a culture that includes devotion to duty and service before self and the critical nature of concussions may often go unheeded According to Sports Related Concussions in Youth if the youth sports community can adopt the belief that concussions are serious injuries and emphasize care for players with concussions until they are fully recovered then the culture in which these athletes perform and compete will become much safer Improving understanding of the extent causes effects and prevention of sports related concussions is vitally important for the health and well being of youth athletes The findings and recommendations in this report set a direction for research to reach this goal
