

Blackburne, 1997, p. 131: "Black and Shapere's (1996) Thesis: Biology's limits determine human life conditions and even experiences, and even values."

But, as Rieppel has demonstrated clearly, biology functions through its powers of modeling, not, like books, as prescriptive devices that lay out instructions for what individuals, other organisms, and human social organizations must and should not do. Biological functions, in other words, are not models, but they are organizational tools, and, clearly, modeling can take advantage of biological functions as tools.

In contrast, neither organismal powers nor biology are models – complex, self-organizing systems.

But, in other organizational systems and other organizations, the limits of biology – biological limits – functionally determine human conditions and experiences – a limit.
