Abstract: Inorganic anionic surfactants composed of inorganic species have been used as emulsifiers for water-in-oil emulsions. In this study, we used sodium dodecyl sulfate (SDS) as an emulsifier to prepare water-in-oil emulsions. The emulsions were prepared by the high-speed stirring method. The emulsions were characterized by dynamic light scattering (DLS) and zeta potential measurements. The results showed that the emulsions were stable and the zeta potential was negative. The emulsions were used as a model system to study the effect of SDS on the stability of emulsions. The results showed that the emulsions were stable and the zeta potential was negative.
