Marshall's organization is a nationally prominent nonprofit think-tank. The organization was founded in 1950, under the name National Institute of Economic and Social Research, and changed its name to the current one in 1986. The organization's main focus is on economic policy, and it has a long history of research and publication in this field. The organization's research is based on a combination of theoretical and applied research, and it has a strong reputation for its work in this area. The organization's research is also based on a strong foundation of data and statistics, and it has a long history of publishing research in this field. Members' contributions allow the funds generally run the fund. All proposed changes to the fund's operations, including amendments to the general budget, will be given notice to the rest of the fund, and then given notice to the members and placed before the general budget committee for approval. The committee will then make a recommendation to the fund's members.

Multi-level management involvement is generally only implemented following requests from below to address existing and emerging HR issues and the opportunity to build trust in efforts that otherwise may seem imposed from the general manager. Encouraging and protecting the personal freedom of employees within the organization is the basis of progressive HR management systems, and the ability to make such decisions makes them an essential core element in having an ability to be effective and valued about general HR efforts that become part of the HR management team. The following discussion will explore:
