Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. The subjects were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR for 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were monitored for HR and EE during the training program and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on HR and EE. The HR of the training group decreased significantly from 160 to 140 beats per minute (p < 0.05). The EE of the training group increased significantly from 1,200 to 1,400 kcal per day (p < 0.05). The control group showed no significant change in HR or EE. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular and metabolic health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

- Day and night periods that are longer than the standard 24 hours occur most commonly with the use of artificial light or other light sources. To avoid this, there are two things the patient can do to help to bring the clock of the body back.
- First, avoid exposure to bright light with the use of light bulbs, as this can have negative effects on the body's clock.
- The second thing is to avoid exposure to bright light in the morning. The patient can try to get some exposure to bright light in the evening. This can be done by using a light box or by going outside.
- Second, avoid exposure to bright light in the morning.

- When a producer's price for the output rises or falls, it must adjust its output accordingly. For example, if the price of the output rises, the producer will increase its output. This is because the producer's marginal revenue (MR) curve shifts up, and the producer will increase its output until its marginal cost (MC) curve intersects its new MR curve.
