Speelman, Marek McGann, 2016-11-29 In a recent paper we Speelman McGann 2013 argued that psychology's reliance on data analysis methods that are based on group averages has resulted in a science of group phenomena that may be misleading about the nature of and reasons for individual behaviour The paper highlighted a tension between a science in search of general laws on the one hand and the individual variable and diverse nature of human behaviour on the other This Research Topic explored this concern about the pitfalls of using the mean for the basis of psychological science The problem is universal in its applicability to psychology and opinion papers reviews and original empirical research from all areas of the discipline were invited A total of 16 authors contributed 9 articles to the Topic The range of issues that the authors viewed through the lens provided is impressive The papers in this collection include a range of perspectives that provide concrete examples of how to approach research design data collection and analysis differently No one contribution will provide a solution to our multifarious challenges but nor should it Our subject matter is complex and subtle our investigations and methodological techniques will need to be equally so Linking Perception and Cognition Michela C. Tacca, 2013 Perception and cognition are tightly related As our primary mode of contact with the world perception is the informational and causal foundation of our cognitive processes it is fundamental to our empirical thinking believing and action planning Traditional accounts of the mind consider perception and cognition to be distinct yet highly interrelated systems Much interdisciplinary empirical and theoretical work from cognitive scientists and philosophers has attempted to elucidate the complex relations holding among these systems suggesting the existence not only of influences of perception on cognition but also vice versa However many questions are left unanswered Given that perception is a guide to our thinking about and acting upon the world appropriately the two systems must be able to talk to one another information carried by perception must be of a form adequate to be taken in by our various cognitive systems The question arises What kinds of structural similarities must hold between perceptual and cognitive representations for such communication to be possible And how exactly do perceptual and cognitive representations interact Some researchers have argued that the links between perception and cognition are so tight as to instill doubt as to the significance of the distinction between the two systems in the first place Yet others insist that perception and cognition remain distinct The aim of this Research Topic is to deepen our understanding of the kinds of interaction among perception and cognition and of the nature of the representational structures that would enable such interaction Provided by publisher Academic Skills Problems Edward S. Decision Making under Uncertainty Kerstin Preuschoff, Peter N. C. Mohr, Ming Hsu, 2015-06-16 Most decisions in life are based on incomplete information and have uncertain consequences To successfully cope with real life situations the nervous system has to estimate represent and eventually resolve uncertainty at various levels A common tradeoff in such decisions involves those between the magnitude of the expected rewards and the uncertainty of obtaining the rewards For instance a decision maker may choose to forgo the high expected rewards of investing in the stock market and settle instead for the lower expected reward and much less uncertainty of a savings account Little is known about how different forms of uncertainty such as risk or ambiguity are processed and learned about and how they are integrated with expected rewards and individual preferences throughout the decision making process With this Research Topic we aim to provide a deeper and more detailed understanding of the processes behind decision making under uncertainty
